Lone Star Frisbee

Lone Star Frisbee is pleased to announce that it is now officially a non-profit educational organization. In the recent past we have been able to provide educational assistance to Austin area schools, charitable organizations, and the Texas Schools for the Blind and Deaf, as well as providing technical assistance to KLRU-TV in production of the award-winning "Khan-Du" series on teaching sports to the handicapped — to name but a few accomplishments.

The workshops, demonstrations and educational assistance are funded largely through proceeds from competitive tournaments. These events are open to the public, draw as many as 20,000 spectators and have been nationally televised. It is through your support that we are able to attract "world class" Frisbee athletes to Austin for participation in these events and as teachers. We want to thank you for your financial and energetic assistance in the past and are delighted to inform you that your donations are now fully tax deductible — both as an individual contributor or a business contribution.

WE INVITE YOU TO COME LEARN WITH US!

“A RUDE HISTORY”

The Rude Boys were born in Mars, PA on July 4, 1981. Rumor has it that “Guido” (Phil Adams) and Kent (F.H. Greenwald) dyed their hair burnt umbra one night and made off to Spit - Boston’s poshest punk palace. There, in an effort to obliterate their memory of the ’80 Nationals losing effort, they danced wildly and reshuffled Boston’s awesome disc talent! Boston Aerodisc was no more! The next day, the crust in their craniums coagulated enough to remember that Steve Mooney, Chris Heye and Nick Donohue were coming into Boston’s circle from Wesleyan University (The Nietzsche Factor). Chris and ravid Nick were bringing their hammers to Beansville for alledged professional reasons, while Moons came due to his affinity for assuming the horizontal mode. The team was further augmented in ’81 by ransacking Aerodisc for Joel Parry, the Rude Boy, and Cornell Buds, Jim “MR. New England” Herrick and Ed “Stick” Dissoway. Stick, who had captained Aerodisc in 1980, happily defrocked himself of green white pinstripes for black and white. From Worcester Polytech came the prehistoric skills of Alan Cave and Joe Ritacco. In 1982, some Aeurbachian wheeling and dealing procured key additions for the Vulgar Lads as WUFSTER Mark Ide and New Moon (John Mooney) were picked up in the rookie draft. Ten year veteran and founder of B.A.D. (BostonAeroDisc) Buzz “FBIII” Laughlin plus Toby “All-Watertown” Lou and “Loaf” Larson joined the squad in order to complement the reckless Rude intensity with a modicum of cool composure. Lastly, a brilliant deal with Rude bro’s Keith and Pat of Berkeley added Herbert Finlay Waugh and “Wheels” Farricker to the Rude roster.

“Rude Dee Cahn’t Fail” their call, the Kids of Crud rely upon a death-stenching and denying man-to-man defense. As their sideliners egg them on, Rudies execute the turnover easy, with constant scrambling and poaching of all errant missives from the home office!

Weaned on 6:00AM “goalfemate” (C. Jim Herrick, Mark Ide, 1982) and constructed of 17 excellent players, the Lads Who Lack Couth are most optimistic that Thanksgiving in Austin will produce four days of the finest Ultimate ever played!!

The Lone Star Frisbee® Club would like to introduce John Stalberger, "Mr. Hacky Sack®". "Mr. Hacky Sack®" will be performing demonstrations and clinics at the National Ultimate Championships.

John was born in Houston, Texas, in 1950 and attended Bellaire High School, Blinn Jr. College and the University of Texas. After injuring his knee, playing football, John set out to find a new life in Portland, Oregon, and the great northwest.

During the seventies he researched and developed the HACKY SACK® footbag and the American Footbag Games (collectively). He founded the NATIONAL HACKY SACK® players ASSOCIATION (NHSA) in 1977, and since its beginning the NHSA has toured throughout the United States and Canada. Over 3,500 schools and colleges have been exposed to the footbag games and now, in the eighties, the NHSA will make its impact on the entire world.

Similarities between the Frisbee® movement and the HACKY SACK® movement are very visible with many footbag clubs springing up throughout the United States, Canada, Japan and Europe.

The Lone Star Frisbee® Club would like to encourage every Frisbee® player and sports enthusiast to meet and talk to John on his visit here in Austin. Learn about the American Footbag Games from the master himself.

A NEW KIND OF FOOTGAME.

Introducing the Hacky Sack[®] footbag and footbag games. Be it for fun or fitness, our footbag games are becoming a popular recreational pastime and one of America's fastest growing sports.

Hacky Sack[®] footbag games are easy to learn, exciting to watch, and due to the footbag's pocket size, convenient to play almost anywhere.

The principle is simple. Just keep the pellet-filled leather footbag bouncing in the air using only your feet and knees. Play it by yourself, with others, or over a net in team competition. It's great for your footwork and does wonders for your concentration. Besides, you can't beat the convenience of having an afternoon's worth of fun tucked into your pocket.

MID ATLANTIC NATIONAL QUALIFIERS

The New Jersey teams again dominated the Mid Atlantic/regional championships, and Glassboro and The Gang took first and second, qualifying for the UPA National Championships. In the Womens's division, University of Virginia swept through the tournament to take first place. Third and fourth places in the men's division went to the Seven Sages (NJ) and Ultimate Air and Space (DC). The Horizontal/Zephyrs took second in the women's division.

As the tournament began, The Gang was the heavy favorite. They had won the NJ sectionals the week before (beating 'Boro 17-15 in overtime), and had beat both The Hostages and The Rude Boys at the Ultimate Affair in Amherst. Indeed, The Gang swept through their pool, and even won their quarterfinal game with key players still in New Jersey. In that pool, the new DC team, Yo Mama (a spinoff of Ultimate Air and Space) took second after getting a scare from the newly invigorated Swarthmore team.

Glassboro won their pool, with the Seven Sages taking second, after getting a scare from an upstart Richmond Flite team. Flite, for years a mediocre team, put it together this year and qualified for the Regionals for the first time. They beat J.D.Stone, the second seed from Pennsylvania, and were tied with 'Boro 8-8 at the half, before losing. Flite is a new force in the Mid Atlantic South section.

The South section as a whole is much improved. Indeed, except for Flite, each team qualified for the quarterfinals. Yo Mama only lost to The Gang, and Univ.of Virginia took second in their pool. First in that pool was UPenn Refubees, the number one team from Pennsylvania. The Refubees have been a very strong team all year long, and were looking to go far this fall. They won their pool with ease. The big game was for second place in that pool and Univ.of Virginia rose to the task defeating Princeton 13-11 in a hard fought battle.

In the fourth pool, Ultimate Air and Space, the Mid Atlantic South Sectional Champions also swept through. They beat King of Prussia Zoo 11-6, then trounced the Knights of Nee, and Steel City Slag 13-3, and 13-4. It was a dramatic improvement over last year, when UAS couldn't make the top eight out of a twelve team regional. Steel City Slag made an impressive showing, too, coming from the newly created West section of the Mid Atlantic (Western PA. and West VA.). Slag took first in their sectional a week ago, and made it to the quarterfinals here by beating the Nee and then King Of Prussia 13-10 in double overtime.

In the Women's division, UVA was totally dominant, but the rest of the region showed amazing strength. Each of the other teams beat each other, to produce this scenario for the final preliminary match: If Andromeda (DC) beat KAOS (NJ), Anromeda would play in the finals against UVA. If KAOS won, the Horizontal/Zephyrs, a team Andromeda beat, would go to the finals, and Andromeda would finish last. Glassboro, who had beaten Andromeda by one with three seconds left in the game, would finish in a tie someplace, but would lose out on tie-breakers. In a very exciting game, KAOS beat Andromeda 8-7 in overtime.

The finals were almost anticlimactic, UVA rose to the occasion and won 21-9. There was one worthy note, however. The level of play in Women's Ultimate has improved at an exponential rate for the second straight year.

In the Men's quarterfinals, The Gang and 'Boro won easily over Steel City Slag, and Univ.of VA, respectively. The UVA team is one in transition- many of their older, experienced players have left during the last year and one half, and UVA, for the first time in years, did not win their sectional, they came in third.

The other two games put the Seven Sages against UPenn, and UAS against Yo Mama. Penn was very confident this year, and saw the expanded format of the Nationals as their ticket to Austin. If there was ever a chance that a non-

Jersey team would qualify for the Nationals from the Mid Atlantic, Penn thought this was it. The Seven Sages had other ideas. The Sages had managed only fourth in their sectionals, but they had it together for the regional and they romped on Penn. In the other quarterfinal game, Yo Mama and Ultimate Air and Space were engaged in a tight battle. Yo Mama's origin can be traced back to the 1981 regionals, when a disappointing showing by the 24 member UAS team prompted about half the team to split and form Yo Mama. This year, both squads were large (a combined total of 40 players), but the quality of play improved for both teams (both teams won their pools at the Ultimate Affair). Although neither team wanted to see the other eliminated, both teams were happy that atleast one of the DC teams would make it to the final four. Like the week before, UAS pulled ahead in the second half and won 11-7.

From the final four, the format agreed upon was double elimination with the proviso that the losers of the final game would not have to play the winner of the losers' bracket if the two teams had already met in the semifinals. As expected, Glassboro beat Ultimate Air and Space. In the meantime, The Sages were on a roll. They fell behind to The Gang early, but kept within striking range. At halftime, The GTang led 8-6. The game remained close until, at 12-10, The Gang pulled away, winning 15-10.

The final game pitted The Gang against Glassboro. The Gang is comprised of most of last year's Knights of Nee. These two teams have met in the finals of three past regionals, and the finals of three past April Fool's Tournaments. They are the class of the Mid Atlantic region, and had met last week in the finals of the Jersey sectionals with the Gang handing 'Boro a 17-15 defeat in overtime. Actually, The 'Boro hadn't beaten The Gang all season.

But last year, the Nee hadn't beaten the 'Boro all season until the finals of the regional. 'Boro was psyched, and they came out like a cyclone. The Gang didn't know what had hit them. Turnovers to quick bombs, patient offense, long hoyas, the 'Boro really mixed it up against The Gang, and made few mistakes in doing so. The Gang played pretty well, but 'Boro was playing the best they had all season. Their offense was simply not making mistakes, and although the first half was hard fought, Glassboro led 8-2!!! They cruised home in the second half, winning 15-10. It was a remarkable showing by the two-time former champs, who many thought might not qualify this year due to losing last year and losing a few players to The Gang (including All-Star Timba D'Urso). The good thing about the expanded format of this year's UPA Nationals is that both teams get to go. Without a doubt, The Gang and Glassboro are head and shoulders above everyone else in the region. I predict that The Gang (along with The Hostages from Boston) will prove to be stronger than the other second place teams that qualify from the other regions.

Chain Lightning; feels so good. The Chain is representing the Southeast Region and is supported by the Atlanta Frisbee Disc Club.

The team was started in early spring of this year by Mike Henderson and Rick Martz. Though only together for nine months, the Chain has travelled well over five thousand miles to tournaments and games against National Ultimate Powers (the Southern way of finding hot competition). In doing so, the team played in April Fools '82 and Ultimate Bowl I with respectable showings and excellent attitudes. Chain Lightning captured First Place at the 5th Annual Mars classic, the First Sinkhole City Classic, UPA Sub-Sectionals and both UPA Regional and Sectional Tournaments.

The Regional Finals game put top-seeded Dallas Skypilots against the Chain. With darkness setting in, the Captains agreed to play points to thirteen with deadline at 6:15 CST. Lightning struck first with Dallas not unchaining themselves until down 7-2. The Skypilots then began hitting with open field passes, but could only reach within three goals and the game ended with more flashes in the Mobile disk. The Chain won 13-9. This ultimate team has a unique-style of play. After a summer-long training program, the Chain has a physical and mental appetite fit for a National Tournament. Many people believe our name describes the speed, intensity and team spirit we release on the field.

The players of CL are looking forward to the 1982 Ultimate Championships and extend a "thanks" to the Ultimate Players Association, Austin Area Ultimate, and Chris Baker for long and hard hours of organization. Chain Lightning would also like to welcome and say hello to the spectators (old and new, known and unknown). You're experiencing a great sport.

Oh yes, the Chain is America's Team and "on a mission from God."

1982 WESTERN REGIONALS

A new era has dawned on the West Coast: No longer can the old guard take new teams lightly. The skills and force displayed by these younger teams prove their role as major contenders.

During the tourney, the respective pools saw the CONDORS edge by COLORADO. While the CIRCUS handily took their pool, the SPINOFFS came from behind to take CHABOT, 20-18. PORTLAND won its pool in a victory over STANFORD.

Quarterfinals pitted the CONDORS against the MUDSHARKS and the CIRCUS against COLORADO. As darkness fell sooner than expected, both games ended at halftime. When play resumed Sunday morning, the inspired MUDSHARKS refused to give away their 2 goal lead and defeated the CONDORS (endangered species??). Meanwhile, the CIRCUS outscored COLORADO 8-2 in the second half to beat them. PORTLAND, playing very hard, squeaked by CHABOT as the SPINOFFS took a tough win over STANFORD.

The semis put CIRCUS and the SPINOFFS into a rough-and-tumble, foul-plagued game, but inspired "D" and a final diving horizontal brought the game home for the CIRCUS! PORTLAND, however, cruised easily by the MUDSHARKS to set up the finals.

In the CIRCUS-FUNHOG final, the CIRCUS, playing great throughout the entire tourney, took the FUNHOGS to the cleaners, 14-9 to win the '82 Western Nationals. Once again, sudden darkness forced the game to an early close as the loser of the final had to play the winner of the loser's bracket to determine 2nd, 3rd, and 4th place finishers. The same darkness forced the game to end early and a decision was made to meet in Chico, CA the following weekend to playoff the 2nd place position. The FUNHOGS won and became the 2nd Western representative to the Nationals.
